

SWOPE MURDER TRIAL MONDAY

ELEVEN INDICTMENTS IN SENSATIONAL CASE

AGAINST DR. B. C. HYDE

Who Is Charged Poisoning and Bleeding Inoculation With Typhoid Germs.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Janesville, Wis., April 9.—Intense interest is manifested here and throughout the state in the impending hearing of the case against Dr. B. C. Hyde, which has been set for next Monday. Dr. Hyde will have to face a series of eleven indictments, two of them charging him with murder in the first degree, one with attempted murder, and eight with various degrees of assault. The case, which has features of unusual and highly sensational interest, promises to be the "sensational case" of this section of the state.

The most serious charges against the defendant which the Grand Jury found against Dr. B. C. Hyde on March 5, of this year, are that he caused the death of Col. Thomas H. Swope and Christian Swope by giving them strychnine. The indictment for manslaughter is based upon the charge that Dr. Hyde caused the death of James Moss Hutton, a cousin of the late Col. Swope, by bleeding him. Perhaps not quite so serious, but far more sensational, are the remaining eight indictments which charge Dr. Hyde with having attempted to murder Margaret Swope, Lacey Lee Swope, Nora Bell Dickinson, George E. Compton, Mildred Fox and Leonard Compton by inoculating them with typhoid fever germs.

Dr. Bennett Clark Hyde, the defendant, is the son of a Baptist minister, now retired, at Lexington, Mo. He was graduated from the West-wood Military Academy at Lexington, and went to Kansas City in the early 90's, and studied medicine. A short time after he had been licensed to practice Dr. Hyde was appointed police surgeon by Mayor Webster before he had served a year. He was removed for unprofessional conduct. When in October, 1898, several unusually bold robberies were committed, Dr. Hyde's name became connected with the matter, but no sufficient proof was found against him. It was three or four years later that the announcement was made of Dr. Hyde's engagement to Miss Frances Swope, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Swope, of Indianapolis, and niece of the late Col. Thomas H. Swope.

The engagement was strongly opposed by Mrs. Margaret Swope, but Frances was determined to marry Hyde and over the fact that several branches of promise letters were filed against him, which did not reflect credit upon his character, did not change her determination. She became the wife of Dr. Hyde and after a while, true was declared and a fairly cordial entente established between the Swope family and Dr. Hyde. The door of the Swope home was opened to the young doctor last summer and soon thereafter began a chain of events which culminated in the death of three persons and came near wiping out the entire Swope family.

The first victim was James Moss Hutton, a cousin and trusted confidant of Col. Swope. He died October 1, 1909 and autopsy was given as the cause of his death. Subsequent investigation developed the fact, however, that death was caused by poison, and the state will attempt to show how Dr. Hyde was in some way responsible for the death of Mr. Hutton.

Col. Thomas H. Swope, a millionaire real estate and mine owner, who gave Swope Park to Kansas City, died suddenly on October 3, 1909, shortly after having taken a capsule at the direction of Dr. Hyde. Drs. Holbrook and Haynes of Chicago, two eminent experts, who made an autopsy of the viscera of Col. Swope, found strychnine in his stomach and liver.

In the month of December a perfect epidemic of typhoid fever broke out in the Swope household. On December 1, Miss Margaret Swope, a niece of Col. Swope, came down with typhoid fever. Two days later Christian Swope, her brother, developed symptoms of the disease and on December 6, he died in independence, after having taken a capsule given to him by direction of Dr. Hyde. Like Col. Swope, Christian Swope died after violent convulsions and an analysis of his stomach also showed the presence of strychnine.

Between December 3 and 21 five other members of the Swope family and a colored maid became ill with typhoid fever, but all of them recovered. All of them are long-time under the will of Col. Swope, who left an estate valued at more than $3,000,000. It will be contended by the state that Dr. Hyde had contemplated to murder these degenerate to increase his share in the estate and that he had inoculated them with typhoid fever germs which he had obtained under a plausible pretext from Dr. L. E. Stewart, a noted bacteriologist, on November 10, 1909.

"Miller is not entitled to plead self defense," said Keesler. "He says the first provocation. He was in another man's house with that man's wife and should have left instead of staying there with an automatic pistol in his pocket with which to shoot down poor Saylor."

TAFT EXPECTED TO SOUND THE KEYNOTE

In His Address On "Republicanism" Before The League Of Republican Clubs Tonight.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Washington, D. C., April 9.—Republicans throughout the country are awaiting with great interest the address on "Republicanism" which President Taft will formally open the Congressional campaign and sound the keynote of the political situation, at the banquet to be given by the League of Republican Clubs at the Lincoln Hotel, at the Arlington Hotel, at the address of President Taft. The address of President Taft and the speeches to be delivered at the same banquet to Senator Lodge, Representative McKittrick of Congress, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, Representative Duncan McMillan of California, John Hays Hammond, president of the National League of Republican Clubs, John A. Stewart of the New York League and John G. Capers, national committee for South Carolina, form part of the program for the defensive campaign mapped out by the leaders of the party. Convinced that the public mind has been impressed by attacks of various kinds in many parts of the country and that the citizen cannot be permitted to be misinformed without injury to Republican prestige, the party leaders decided to carry the war into the enemy's country.

In these addresses some facts are to be brought out relating to the operation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and the enemies of that legislation will be called upon to answer the friends of the administration with some concrete evidence for their side.

NEWS FORECAST FOR THE COMING WEEK

Politicians, Baseball Fans, and Census Enumerators to the Fore—and Roosevelt, of Course.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Washington, D. C., April 9.—The annual observance of the Thomas Jefferson anniversary will serve to keep Democratic politics to the fore this week. The principal celebration is to be a banquet in Washington under the auspices of the Democratic club of the nation. Although distinguished in their efforts to secure the attendance of Governors Harman and Marshall and Mayor Gaynor, now regarded as the three presidential possibilities, the league has secured as speakers Champ Clark of Missouri, Representative Shively of Indiana, Clayton of Alabama and Bailey of Illinois, Senator Hughes of Colorado, Gore of Oklahoma and other Democratic leaders of national prominence. Democrats of Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois and other states have also arranged for other day, but guests at which noted speakers will be heard. In Los Angeles there will be a two days' conference at which it is expected that the candidates and plans for the coming democratic campaign in California will be definitely determined.

President Taft's only public engagement for the week will be his appearance at the opening of the annual convention of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, at which he will deliver an address of welcome.

The work of taking the decennial census of the United States, for which preparations have been going forward for several years, will begin promptly on Friday morning, when an army of about 80,000 enumerators will begin the collection of statistics regarding the population, industries and resources of the nation.

What promises to develop into one of the most notable ceremonial events of recent years will come to a head in Kansas City Sunday, when Dr. H. C. Hyde will be arraigned for trial on the charge of having murdered millionaire Thomas H. Swope. After millions spent in preparation and preliminary practice the baseball season of 1910 will be ushered in with the opening games in the two big leagues as well as in several of the minor organizations.

The European tour of Colonel Roosevelt will figure conspicuously in the news of the week. Other events of more or less interest will be the meeting of the Mystic Shriners in New Orleans, the presentation of a silver service to the battleship South Carolina, a conference of the textile manufacturers of the South at Memphis, the probable decision in the famous Russell will contest at East Cambridge, Mass., and various developments in the wave of unrest that seems to have swept over the labor world.

WILL TAKE PRIMARY ELECTION LAW CASE TO A HIGHER COURT

Decision Of State Supreme Court In Favor Of Law Will Be Appealed To U. S. Supreme Court.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Appleton, Wis., April 9.—Although the Wisconsin primary election law has been declared constitutional and the findings of the lower court in which the case was tried have been affirmed by the supreme court, the attack of the law is not to cease here, for Atty. J. E. Lehr of Appleton, representing A. B. Van Alstine of Dale, Outagamie county, complainant in the case, declared today that in all probability the action will be appealed to the United States supreme court and efforts will be made to get a decision before the next September primaries.

Inasmuch as the state supreme court, in its opinion and decision made a ruling affecting the primary election law as applied to the nominating of candidates to the United States senate, Senator Lehr declares that the case is appealable to the nation's highest tribunal. Dismissing the matter today Senator Lehr said:

"While I have not as yet received my copy of the supreme court's opinion in the case of A. B. Van Alstine against the state secretary and treasurer involving the constitutionality of the Wisconsin primary election law, I have gleaned enough from Milwaukee newspapers that farmed the opinion sufficiently at length to lead me to believe that the state court dealt with a federal matter in that feature of its opinion, rendering on the applicability of the primary law to the nomination of United States senators. If the copy of the opinion of the case substantiates my present understanding and belief I can say at this time that in all probability the case will be appealed to the United States supreme court and every effort will be made to secure an opinion on the primary election next fall."

Books Led to Murder.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is the latest author to come under the ban of the book censors. It is reported that, owing to a murder committed recently by two Swiss farm hands, who nearly exterminated the whole farm household, it has been decided by the Swiss railway authorities, as a legation, that no literature of a tragic sort, especially of that kind dealing with detective stories, shall be on public sale. Among others, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes" books are on the Swiss index, and cannot henceforth be bought at Swiss railway stations. The farm hands declared that they were led to commit their crime through having read fascinating stories of how murders were committed.

COIN SOMETHING OF A FREAK

Atlanta the Possessor of Silver Dollar with Two Heads—Its History.

Hansel W. Compton has just returned from New Orleans, La., where he went upon a business trip, bringing with him the only genuine silver dollar with heads stamped on both sides ever seen in Atlanta. And thereby hangs a tale, relates the Atlanta Constitution.

Mr. Compton got this silver dollar in change and did not notice the unusual fact about it at the time. Some time later he was matching a friend for car fare, happening to use this silver dollar, when he noticed that the coin fell "heads" every time. He looked closer and saw that there was a head on each side of the dollar. Under one head were the figures "1906," the date of the initial stamping, and under the other "1909," the date of the second stamping.

He showed it to several New Orleans men, who offered him various premiums the highest being $10, all of which he refused.

The story in connection with this coin is as follows: An employee in the New Orleans mint, whose duty it was to run the silver coin through the dies to have the head stamped upon it substituted a current silver dollar for the coin immediately after the head had been stamped upon it, with the other side unstamped and perfectly slick. This was in 1904. Three years later he ran the coin through the stamp for the reverse side, impressing another head and 1909 upon it. The fact that a coin had been put in, at the first instance, to replace the half-stamped dollar, prevented detection. In this manner, it is explained, the silver dollar came to have its two heads.

FORD

The Car of Satisfactory Service for Every Use

The Cost to Travel in a Ford vs. Cost by Horse, Trolley or Train

It will cost $150.00 a year to feed one horse and $30.00 more for shoeing and recalking. No matter how little you use the horse, you have to feed him and keep him shod; you don't lessen the expense by not using the animal. At the most, you cannot expect over ten miles a day, average. Contrast that with the Ford. Ten thousand miles a year is easily possible, and the upkeep cost for gasoline, tires, repairs and oil will be less than the expense bill of the horse.

In November, 1907, the American Car Company bought a Ford Car for its Detroit salesman. Twice a year he sends in to headquarters an itemized account of his automobile expense. The last report, just sent in, shows an average expense of $9.34 per month for the entire twenty-seven months. This includes every cent paid out on account of the car.

A continuous speed of twenty-five to thirty miles an hour is an easy average for a Ford car. It will make forty to fifty miles or three to ten miles if required. Physicians whose practice required three horses have, by substituting a Ford, cut down the expense, increased their calls, and had more leisure time.

The cost of travel by train is from two cents to three cents per mile per passenger. The cost to travel in a Ford is 1 1/4 to 1 1/2¢ per mile.

A Building Contractor in Chicago was spending four dollars a week car fare between two jobs in opposite parts of the city. He later on found that the car fare alone would pay the total upkeep cost of a Ford Car. Then add the value of the time lost, easily worth four dollars a day, you can appreciate the real worth of this car to that contractor. There are many people in this city to whom the cost of a Ford Car would be less than nothing.

The Model T Ford will run twenty-five to thirty miles per gallon of gasoline; the heavy car from eight to fifteen. A Ford won an economy test in Pensacola, Florida, Feb. 2nd, by making twenty-eight and one-half miles over sandy roads on one gallon of gasoline, and the official observer traveled in a car that consumed three and one-half gallons at the same time.

Hundreds of Ford Cars sold in 1909 have the original wind in the tires right now. They have never even had a puncture. The light weight of the Ford is responsible for this. The Ford tires will average about double the tire life of the tires on any two thousand pound car manufactured. Fifteen thousand miles on a set is quite common, and then, when finally worn out, the price of a new set is so much less, because the size is smaller, due to the light weight of the car. But the weight is plenty heavy for every possible requirement. The Model T Ford will go anywhere any other car will, and lots of places many of them will not. Every Ford buyer is a booster. Every seventh car sold in the United States in 1909 was a Ford Car, and every car made good. Your neighbor owns one—ask him.

It is the light weight of the Ford Car that accomplishes this result. The car weighs but twelve hundred pounds. Its twenty horse power engine has to propel only sixty pounds per horse power. The average "30" weighs twenty-one hundred pounds or seventy pounds per horse power. This larger engine requires more fuel and oil; this increased weight demands more expense to move it. That is just plain, ordinary horse sense. You cannot increase the load without increasing the cost to haul it, be it potatoes or automobiles. Also the greater weight is harder on tires, and the tires must be larger. We know of a forty horse power car that costs its owner three cents a mile for tires alone.

If you are skeptical, let us fix up a demonstration. Select the hardest route you can find. Have any other car come along; if they can "follow the Ford," you will get the most convincing demonstration that an automobile ever made, and the other car will need to be a good one if it stays with us. Say when, please.

THE MAD MULLAH.
"Mad Mullah" on Warpath—Hundreds of Foes Slain.

Aden.—The fierce campaign of Mohammed Abdullah of Somaliland, the "Mad Mullah," against the Sultanate under British protection, continues unchecked. Eight hundred of the tribesmen friendly to the Sultanate have been slaughtered, vast areas laid waste and towns razed. Natives in great numbers are fleeing to the coast. It is expected here that this will lead to another expedition against the "Mad Mullah," who has caused the British government great anxiety for many years.

Mohammed Abdullah started his campaign early in February, a large force of dervishes raiding the Sultanate of the Moritis, killing and burning in all directions. The administration of this Sultanate is entrusted to the government of Italian Somaliland. The "Mad Mullah" began stirring up the natives of Somaliland after making a pilgrimage to Mecca in 1896. After much fighting an agreement was reached in 1905 whereby the mullah undertook to observe peace toward both Great Britain and Italy.

A Taste for Good Books.
If I were to pray for a taste which should stand me in stead under every variety of circumstances, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me through life and a shield against its ills, however things might go amiss and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading.
I speak of it, of course, only as a worldly advantage, and not in the slightest degree as superseding or doing away from the higher office and surer and stronger panoply of religious principles—but as a taste, an instrument, and a mode of pleasurable gratification. Give a man this taste, and the means of gratifying it, and you can hardly fail of making a happy man, unless, indeed, you put into his hands a most perverse selection of books.—Sir John Herschel.

CHAS. WEIRICK NEED NOT SURRENDER THE ABSTRACT COPIES

Clause in Injunction Order Relating to Books Has Been Stayed by Judge Grimm—Hearing April 19.

The blank abstract books which Register of Deeds Charles H. Weirick purchased from the county and into which have been copied about 75 per cent of the county's abstracts of titles, will not be delivered into the hands of Clerk of Court Joseph Earle pending the trial of the action that has been commenced against the official to perpetually enjoin him and his agents from making copies of the said records or any portion thereof. Attorney Fred C. Burpee who, together with M. G. Jeffers, represents the defendant, went to Monroe last evening to see Judge Grimm and secure an order to show cause why the injunction should not be dissolved. The order was served on District Attorney John L. Fisher this morning and the circuit court hearing will take place on Tuesday, April 19, at 2 p. m. The clause order stays that portion of Court Commissioner Edwin F. Carpenter's injunction order which commanded Mr. Weirick to deliver his books into Mr. Earle's custody during the pendency of the action, it, according to the county's own theory, the sale of these volumes to Mr. Weirick was unauthorized and they are county property, the fact nevertheless remains, according to counsel for the defense, that the said Weirick, as register of deeds, is the only proper custodian and they cannot properly be taken from him and entrusted to any other official.

FAY STRIPPED AND PLACED IN A CELL

Extraordinary Precautions Being Taken at Richmond to Prevent Escape of Notorious Bank Robber.

"They won't try any silk thread and every dual work on my bars," said the jailer at Richmond, Va., after Eddie Fay, alias Fred Cunningham, and Frank Chester, alias Little Dick Harris, charged with having robbed the cashier's safe of the Richmond postoffice, had been bathed, stripped and placed naked in their cells. Over a thousand people were at the station yesterday morning to meet the train carrying the prisoners and got a glimpse of the two men. Great care is being taken that the two criminals will not repeat their performance at the Rock county jail, in Richmond, and a heavy guard of postoffice inspectors guarded them on the train. Even greater precautions were taken in New York when the men appeared for a hearing. Fifty deputies surrounded them while in an additional precaution, Fay and Harris were securely handcuffed.

SECOND OF "OPEN HOUSE" MEETINGS

Members of Y. M. C. A. Gave a Public Entertainment at Association Building Last Night.

The second of the series of "open house" entertainments planned by the social committee of the Y. M. C. A. was held last evening at the association building. Despite the fact that other attractions kept many people away, there was a good-sized crowd present and the program given was greatly enjoyed. Each number was heartily applauded and cheered. The opening number was a piano solo by Miss Nett. She was followed by Miss Cora Anderson, who rendered two pleasing vocal selections. Sterling Campbell appeared in a light-colored suit that for an amateur was very effective. The readings by Miss Florence Weber were highly appreciated and Miss Edna Mitchell's vocal solos were well worthy of the praise they received. A guitar and mandolin duet by Rollo Dobson and F. K. Doane was delightfully rendered and they responded to two encores. The songs by Miss Agnes Griebel were much enjoyed. A violin selection by Rollo Dobson ended the program. The members of the social committee extend to those who took part last evening, their most hearty thanks for the services rendered.

ATHLETIC CARNIVAL AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Evening of Fun and Sport Was Enjoyed by Students and Faculty—Seniors Won Basketball Game.

The annual festivities of sport at the high school, the athletic carnival, were held last evening in the gymnasium of the building, students and faculty joining in making the affair a grand success. The first events were relay races between the freshmen and sophomores and the seniors and juniors. The sophomores outran the freshmen, coming half a lap ahead of them, and the seniors were too speedy for the juniors, finishing a full lap ahead. In the final the sophomores won, crossing the line about fifteen yards ahead of the fourth year men. The final between the preliminary relay contest and the final was filled in with a human burden race between Professors Munroe and Knudson of the faculty and Russell Wilkinson and Don Stewart of the senior class. The seniors fell twice in the race but won two straight heats from the professors and were declared the victors. Basketball team picked from the sophomore and freshmen classes played a close and exciting game, which ended favorably for the second year men by the score of 16 to 14. The feature of the evening's entertainment and which brought out the liveliest interest was the match game between the faculty basketball five and a picked team from the senior class, no first team men being allowed to play. The faculty strove hard to win, but the fourth year men were more experienced in the game and won, 23 to 14. That the faculty were not beaten worse is due to the splendid training and organization by Captain H. C. Duell. Crissey and Brown were the stars for the faculty. Duell held his man to two goals and made one himself. Beers featured in two spectacular throws from the center of the field to the basket. Professor William Vlyman refereed the game. The lineups of the teams.
Sophomores: Korst and Hazen, forwards; Cunningham, center; Falter and Langhlin, guards.
Freshmen: Kuhlen and Soultman, forwards; Edler, center; Stewart and Hayes, guards.
Seniors: Blunk and Crissey, forwards; Brown, center; McCarty and Campbell, guards.
Faculty: Knudson and Ruhr, forwards; Munroe, center; Beers and Duell, guards.

ELKS' OFFERING A REFINED "SCREAM"

Rare Comedy of "They Loved A Lassie" Convinced Big Audience Last Evening—Captivating Melodrama.

"They Loved A Lassie," and "They were the best ever," $15, likewise, the "classical," the emotional, the sentimental, the dramatic, the farcical, the Scotch, the phlegmatic, the dancing chorus, the railway hotel at Pitloche, the devoted domestic Jane, and each and every other member of the splendid company of talented entertainers who delighted a non-repudiated house at the Myers theatre last evening. Janeville Lodge No. 254, B. P. O. E. gets the credit for uncorrupted the smoothest and most suave exposition of sheer fun—and legitimate fun at that—which has made "the sides to quiver and the rafters ring" for many long months.

In the first place the book of the place is by George Arliss who appeared here with Mrs. Fisher as "The Blunder" in the name part of "The Devil." It is a rare comedy with a twist that is not incidentally, but a masterpiece. There is no straining for effect. Every mirth-provoking situation is developed and every dance and topical song fits in as naturally as the improvised toast "To Our Absent Brothers," tossed off by the genial Evans during the last act.

The plot, with its amusing complications, is reminiscent of "Mrs. Tuppence's Telegram." "The Wrong Mr. Wright," and other best comedies and omissions as ingenious. If not more so. Two young English husbands deceive their wives by indulging in a jink to Scotland, when they are supposed to be tossing on the bounding billows of the Atlantic aboard a liner that is subsequently reported lost. There is a woman in the case—a rather giddy, mocking little reminiscence of their past lives—who has most unexpectedly threatened to step into the picture of domestic felicity and bliss and who is responsible for all the changes of plans and the awful tangle in which the two heroes are finally enmeshed.

The trip to Scotland lets in the pipers and dancers and dialect and vivid local color, and because they are not far-fetched and jammed into the place without a "by-your-leave," they are much more acceptable than anything from Peru, or Sulu, or the Cannibal Islands could possibly be.

Charles E. Evans as "William Waring," the adroit and plausible model husband, No. 1 and George Pettit as "Henry Lawson," the No. 2 model, are a merry pair and the way they cut loose and caper about at the Pitloche Inn, until Alice Yorkie, in the person of "Mile Antoinette Smith"—the victim from the past—appears upon the scene, is something hard to see. Afterward, it is even better. Everything keeps getting better right along.

Evans has lost none of his old-time powers as a polished comedian and Pettit, with his wonderful play of facial expression, is an admirable partner in the adventures. Dainty Alice Yorkie is a beautiful singer as well as an accomplished actress and William Stewart who plays the part of "Joe McCann" is also gifted with a splendid voice and a command of the Scotch dialect which materially enhances the realism of the piece.

Every musical number was a hit last evening and Robert Bruce Cameron who danced the sailor's hornpipe was several times recalled. The Scotch parade, the duet "You're My Little Annie Laurie" by Mr. Stewart and Miss Yorkie, the solo "If I Had the World to Give You" by Stewart, the numbers "Why I Married You" and "Silver Moon" by Miss Yorkie and "Good Bye People, Good Bye" by the chorus, and Evans' topical song "The Banisher" (which included the worm with the Salome squirrel) were some of the pleasing contributions.

"They Loved A Lassie" is a well-crafted departure in music comedy. May there be more of them. George V. Gray and his orchestra deserved and received the highest commendation and approval for their splendid accompaniments.

Not a Masterpiece.

Guyles married. His bachelor friends rallied him. One, less than the rest, blurted out: "Tell us all about the bride, is she a beauty?" Guyles replied: "All I care to say is this—she is one of God's creations, but she is not His masterpiece."

PRESS COMMENT.

Spills the Sport.
The person of an inventive turn of mind who devised a spring gauge for a fish line to show the weight of the fish that got away, supposed he had supplied a universal want, but it seems that some of them fear to have their stories weighed.—Rockford Register-Gazette.

Charged Water, Seltzer.

We have known for a long time that corporations watered their stock and some milkmen their milk, but remained for a New Jersey grand jury to make the discovery that when you buy a chicken which has been in cold storage we are paying from 9 to 14 per cent for water due to the thawing process resorted to. Is this a case of freeze-out or the water cure being applied to the dear public?—Stoughton Courier-Stub.

Teddy Did Right.

It is claimed that Roosevelt hasn't written to Taft for a whole year and it is suggested that this indicates a coolness between them. To some, however, this condition is just as it should be and proves solely that Roosevelt was wise enough to withdraw his personality from the scene and leave Taft alone to fight his battles without hindrance or suspicion of being dominated by the pretentious administration.—Rockford Republic.

PAID WAGER ON THE LOCAL OPTION VOTE

Ed. Rausch, Student at School for Blind, Gave James Prosser Wheelbarrow Ride.

A wager over the outcome of the vote on the local option amendment made by students at the State School for the Blind, was paid this morning, the loser, Edward Rausch of Madison, a wheelbarrow ride from the school to the end of State street and back, a distance of about a mile. The incident was the occasion of much fun for the students of the school, who gathered in force for the sport. The march was led by the school orchestra driven in a wagon and followed by Prosser and Rausch. In the rear were other young men from the school, some of them carrying bells and keeping time in their clanking to the music of the orchestra.

The Ticklemouse

—and his Sleepyland Adventures

By Roy Rutheford Bailey with Davy and Dorfy

A Chinese Baby's New Year

WELL, children," said the Ticklemouse, "happily, the twins and his ship last night, did you say 'Lung heu, mai'?"

"Yes," we said it over and over," said Davy, "but they just jumbled it up and tried to make it go home."

The mouse laughed loud and long when the little boy told him what the laundrymen had said.

"What's funny?" asked Dorfy. "Do you know what it means?"

"Sure pop!" laughed the Ticklemouse. "It means 'You heap bewitched Mexican babies—no get any laundry here!' The words I taught you last night, you see, meant 'I've come for my laundry.' You remembered them, all right, I can see that!"

He chuckled again as they drew near Peking—from the east, this time—and waited in the sheltering clouds till after dark to hunt up poor Humpy.

Great was their disappointment, when at last they slipped through the deep-long shadows to the city gates, to find no trace of the suffering China Egg man.

The mouse sighed. "Too late; they've carried him back to the palace by this time, probably, and flung him on the imperial scrap heap. Too bad! I had hoped we could turn the tables on old Mother Goose and make that rhyme come out right. Well, we've done our best for Humpy. Let's take a peep at the Chinese babies, with their slant eyes and their little coal-black piglets and their New Year's presents—if they give such things over here."

For a time they hovered over Peking, gazing down on the noisy city in its gaily dressed of paper-lanterns and sticks and yellow dragons and suns. The streets were packed with gay crowds—all classes, from common coolies in their sober garments to rich Chinamen in flowing silks and funny round caps with little red buttons atop—from smiling grown-ups to solemn little babies in their quaint holiday robes, toddling along with their annals.

They saw wonderful processions, headed by shaven priests followed by sacrifice-bearers with their burdens of roasted fowls. They shuddered when an immense golden dragon wriggled along through the streets blowing smoke from his nostrils and flame from his cruel mouth—only a make-believe creature, though, with dozens of men inside its sly skin.

The Ticklemouse guided the airship slowly above the long parade till the

He jabbered excitedly in his foreign baby talk, but the "bad old witch-bird" wouldn't slow away.

"He says he's Chow Len's little boy," explained the Ticklemouse to the twins, "and that he's lost, and the Sing Song Tong and the highlanders will get him if his ayah—his nurse—doesn't come quick, but he can't remember his way home. Let's see if we can't help him," and he lifted the struggling youngster into the aeroplane, holding him close as they sped from house to house through the wealthy part of the city.

Patiently the mouse followed out one street after another, always keeping about even with the second-story windows. Suddenly the baby gave a jump that almost carried him overboard, crying out, "Ching Foy! Lung yo, lung yo, Ching Foy!" and stretching his tiny hands toward a woman weeping behind the flower pots of a softly lighted balcony.

"Says he wants his nurse!" chuckled the Ticklemouse. Davy and Dorfy saw the weeping woman lift a white, scared face—then reach so far over the railing that the flower pots crashed to the street. The mouse brought the airship so close to Ching Foy's side that the happy baby sprang right into her eager arms.

"Kwang he fat toy!" whispered the Ticklemouse as she snatched the child to her breast and vanished into the house. He laughed in delight and shouted something else after her as the aeroplane rose high in the air and sought the eastern trade wind.

"What toy that you said to the little boy's nurse?" Dorfy asked as they flew homeward, happy to have helped some body in spite of Humpy's mysterious disappearance.

The mouse stopped singing, and kissed the little girl as they bowed merrily along home.

"I wished her a Happy New Year," said he. "And I told her the lively little package I handed her was her Chinese New Year's present—a present from her far-off neighbor, Uncle Sam!"

The wee toddler was more scared than ever when he saw a big, white, winged bird swoop down beside him.

doors of a lantern-hung joss house swallowed up the crowd, the sing-song chant of the priests still sounding faintly above the hollow jangle of the coppersy gongs. Suddenly a sad, frightened wail made the mouse lean over and stare down at a little figure standing alone in the deserted street.

VERY LIKE BUSINESS MATTER

Little Romance in Many of the Marriages Contracted by German Couples.

From the beginning the little German girl is trained to matrimony. "Eat your fish fresh and marry your daughter while she is young," runs the German proverb. The girl, coming from a race of practical-minded, self-handed people with a counter-balance of idealism, has her dreams of a fairy prince. They dwindle and fade in the face of realities till at last she is glad to marry a sober business man from 10 to 30 years her senior. This discrepancy in years is due to the circumstance that a man in Germany, according to government regulations, must spend so many years in preparation for his profession that by the time he is able to support a wife he is at the age when an American man has already made the initial success of his career. But men and women are anxious enough to marry.

When other hope fails some of them advertise, for many German newspapers have a kind of marriage market in their columns. Such advertisements read:

"I am still young, strong, and with a fortune of 12,000 marks. How shall I go about getting a husband? Kind advice sought by — and so on."

"A Jewish lady of 25, beautiful, with a dowry of 200,000 marks, would like to marry a man of title and good family. She would be willing to be baptized into his religion. A meeting must be arranged for in a dignified manner."

"The manager of a good business would like to marry a pretty widow, very strong, weighing about 180, but of good figure, and with a fortune of a few thousand marks."

"That man sees life truly who gains what is best and most uplifting from his living, he who has strengthened his soul by contemplation of the great and good things which bless our humanity."

DAILY DIET HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist.

MEAT IS UNNECESSARY.

A dog cannot live well on vegetables, nor a rabbit on meat. Each animal's system is adapted to a particular kind of food, an examination of the structure of their digestive organs shows. Some animals are wholly carnivorous, others wholly herbivorous. Others, it is said, are omnivorous, naturally eating a great variety of food, and in this class man is commonly included. The stomach of the flesh-eaters is much larger, proportionately, than the intestine, and in the vegetable feeders the reverse is true, with a few exceptions, the cow, for instance, having four stomachs. The animal which most closely resembles man in its alimentary system is the gorilla, and its natural food is nuts and fruits. Prof. Huxley maintaining that it is a strict vegetarian. From this some authorities infer that nuts and fruits should form the staple of human food. The majority of the human race eat no meat, and the individuals who abstain from it in this country say that they have greater endurance and better health than when they ate meat. Certainly, the gorilla, the elephant, the horse and other non-flesh eaters compare favorably with the lion, the tiger and the wolf in strength and longevity.

MAY DE SOUZA, PRIMA DONNA IN "A SKYLARK."

Washington—May de Souza, prima donna in Henry B. Harris' initial musical production, "A Skylark," which has its premier at the Columbia theater on Monday, March 14, is the only American prima donna whose ability and genius were recognized abroad before being accepted in New York, which prides itself on being the theatrical producing center of America.

Miss de Souza was born in Chicago.

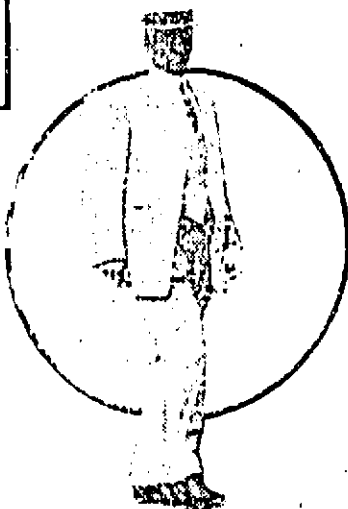

Her first engagement was in "The Wizard of Oz." She made her first appearance in London at the Drury Lane theater December 26, 1905, as Cinderella in a pantomime. She subsequently appeared in Paris in musical comedies. President Taft added oclat to the opening of "A Skylark" and bought a box for the opening night to witness her performance and hear Miss de Souza sing.

Official Head of the Southern Pacific Railroad and Chairman of the Board of Directors, Judge Lovett.

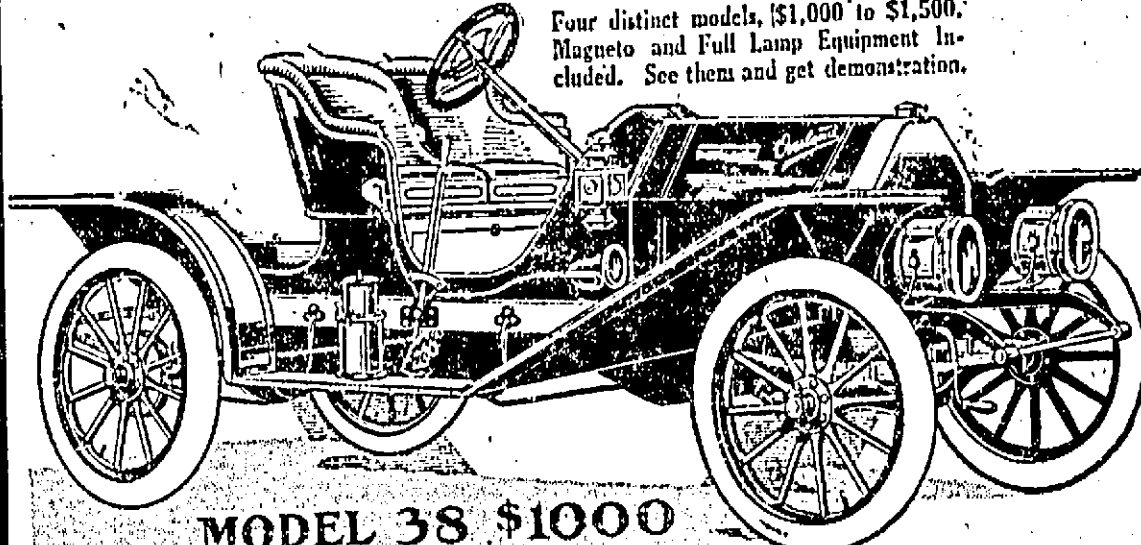

Louisville, Ky.—At a small suburb just outside of this city is located the central office of one of the greatest American railroads, the Southern Pacific. About the middle of April the annual meeting of the stockholders will theoretically take place here. As a matter of fact the stock will be voted by proxy and although the building is entirely too small to contain the thousands of shareholders of the railroad itself it will comfortably accommodate all who will be on hand.

This great railroad, consolidated through the genius of the late Mr. Harriman, may have its palatial offices in all of the large cities of the United States, but none is more important to the railroad than this little one-room shack, of which little is heard. The building is the permanent office of the secretary of the company.

MODEL 38 $1000

Four distinct models, $1,000 to $1,500. Magneto and Full Lamp Equipment Included. See them and get demonstration.

Order Your Overland Now, Delay Means Disappointment

Last season there were over 8,000 people whose orders for Overlands were received too late. The Overland can build only 20,000 cars this year. EVERY CAR HAS BEEN CONTRACTED FOR. WHEN OUR ALLOTMENT IS FILLED WE CANNOT GET MORE AT ANY PRICE. We can get only half the cars we asked for. Half the people who want to buy Overlands here will be unable to get them. Get yours now.

The tremendous demand for Overlands has practically swamped the factory. Orders are piling in at twice the rate of production. Even with five times the factory facilities of last year, the output is daily falling further behind the demand.

Every Overland put into an owner's hands sells four others like it. Sixteen thousand 1910 Overlands were contracted for last August, simply on the record of four thousand 1909 cars. Every new Overland that appears on the road creates further demand for this wonderful car.

The reason behind this unheard-of demand is sheer merit—nothing else. Up to January, 1910 the car was never even advertised. But the Overland proved so reliable, so simple, so trouble-proof so economical that now everybody who learns the facts want one of these matchless cars.

Men who never before thought of buying cars are buying Overlands. Men who have owned other cars are buying them for their mechanical correctness. Wealthy men buy them because of their handiness. Poor men buy Overlands because they are the first good cars at a moderate cost. You see the new Overlands everywhere. Twelve hundred have been sold in New York city alone. Fifteen hundred were bought by dealers in Texas. The more people know about the Overland, the more they want it.

We have a few Overlands on our floor ready for immediate delivery. Come in today and get a demonstration. Make your own comparison. Bring an expert with you if you are unfamiliar with motor cars. You will appreciate the Overland's simplicity and smooth running; he will approve its mechanical excellence. The car is right.

The 25-horse power Overland costs $1,000. The 40-horse power models $1,250, $1,400 and $1,500, depending on type of body. Every Overland is as good as any other Overland—the cost is just a matter of size and power. You can buy nothing intrinsically better.

You will sooner or later need just such a car as the Overland—a car guaranteed for life. Put in your order now and have the use of your car all the season. Phone or write us for a demonstration.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Los Angeles is to have a great automobile race meeting April 8 to 16, inclusive. All the stars of the racing world are to take part in the races on the board track, on which it has been shown that great speed can be developed. Philadelphia, Pa.—The annual Easter performance of the Mask and Wig club of the University of Pennsylvania is always a great social event in the Quaker city. This year the demand for seats was even greater than usual. This was evidenced by the long line of students, spectators and office boys who began to gather three days and nights before the box office opened. This broke all records so far as known for long waits for college play theater tickets.

The students held their places in line in relays, spelling each other every four hours, and the time while they were on duty was not lost, for they could be seen studying everything from political economy to Ovid.

Every Upright American Citizen Is A Provider For His Family

Not only for the present, but for the future and Life Insurance should be his first duty to his family and mark this: IT IS A PRIVILEGE

If You can Buy Life Insurance, Do It NOW

It will be the best investment you ever made. WE WISH EVERY MAN WOULD UNDERSTAND THE BENEFIT OF THE PROTECTION of a 20-year Endowment in the Aetna. We want to preach Protection in Life Insurance, not investment, not savings, not profits, all good in their way, but subordinate, minor, relatively unimportant in comparison with the One Big, Important, Essential Feature of Life Insurance, Protection for the benefit of women and little children, who need it and need it most when their breadwinner no longer stands guardian over them. Let us call it the policy of protection, the substitute bread winner, the volunteer who steps into the breach when the regular has passed on his way; call it what you will, but above all don't neglect to get it now. Today, while you may, it may already be too late for you to get the benefits. Strange, but the average man thinks it is one of the easiest things in the world to get life insurance, and then is staggered oftentimes to find that he has waited just one day too long. Suppose you try. See us today.

Here are some of the pertinent facts of the policy:

If the policy is in force one year, it is incontestable EXCEPT FOR NON-PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS.

You will share in the earnings of the company, which earnings may be applied on the premiums, or they can be made to hasten the maturity of the contract.

You can borrow money of this policy as per Table "A." At end of second year $46.00, third year $91, etc. You can apply the loan as payment of premium. If two or more years full premiums have been paid and there is no indebtedness on account of loans, the policy will be extended as temporary insurance for the full sum insured, including dividend additions, for the length of time shown in the table "A" under the column "Extended Insurance," and at the end of the 20 years the company will also pay in cash the amount in table "A" under the column "Pure Endowment." As an example: Suppose you paid four years and then stopped; you would receive $1000 insurance and $12 in cash at the end of that time; at 5 years you get 15 years' insurance and $95 cash, etc.

If the policy should lapse for non-payment of premiums, it can be re-insured at any time within five years by paying the amount due with interest. If satisfactory evidence of insurability is furnished to the company.

Suppose you become totally disabled from sickness or accident, or become blind, or if you lose both hands or both feet or one hand and one foot, then your premiums on this policy stop and the company pays you one-twentieth of the policy each year until the full sum of the policy has been paid.

Suppose you saved your money in a bank; you would get 3 to 5 per cent interest. If you put your money into this policy you share in the earnings of the company which last year on one of Freedom from Restrictions: The contract is free from conditions as to residence, occupation, travel or place of death.

Grace in Payment of Premium: Grace of thirty-one days, during which time the contract will remain in full force, will be allowed in the payment of all premiums.

NO MAN CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT INSURANCE

Think of the benefit it would be to wife and family or mother, if you should be called by death. Think of the great amount you would get all in one sum at the expiration of the policy, and then consider that it really costs you nothing except the interest on the money you can borrow money on the policy, how it will carry itself, how you can be reinstated within five years if you should lapse.

INSURE YOUR WIFE

and make the $1000.00 payable to your child, you will be saving just that much money and all during the twenty years your wife is insured. Every rich man is insured heavily, every poor man needs it even more.

Many men are insured, but their wives are not, yet no man would insure one-half of his home and not the other. Insurance is as necessary on the mother of a family as on the father.

Now is the best time to consider this matter. Every day, every month you put it off you are getting older—your rate is getting higher and no one knows when it will be too late.

Life Insurance is a privilege. If it is within your reach today secure it today—tomorrow may be too late. We write the best policy in the world and with one of the strongest old-line companies.

If you take out a policy with us you deal with an agency that has been established 36 years, an agency that has looked to the interest of its clients in a most thorough manner. During those 36 years of experience we have found that our companies are of the best in the world, and that it is wise to deal with a permanent established agency. Take out a policy with us and it will mature with us. Don't deal with an agent who is here today and gone tomorrow.

Write us to send you a sample policy so that you can read it over carefully, or if you prefer, we will call and explain the policy to you. Fill out the coupon right now.

WHAT HE WAS FITTED FOR

By NATHAN HARDY

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Donald Hatch was to receive a small fortune on attaining his majority. Young people are impatient, and Donald was no exception to the rule. His palms itched for his inheritance that he might spend it at once.

He went to the president of the —th National bank, told him that he desired to finish his education and should be obliged if he would advance him some money. The president declined to do so on behalf of the bank, but told him he would let him have the amount he desired on his own account. Donald signed a note, received the money and proceeded to "blow it in."

A few weeks after he had made the first loan he went to the president for more, telling him that he had finished one course of study and wished to take another. The president, too busy to look into the matter, furnished more money, and Donald sent it after what he had received before. In this way he got away with considerable means and six months before attaining his majority concluded to make as large a raise as possible and go abroad.

When Donald sailed for Europe with $5,000 in his pocket he had borrowed about twice the amount of his inheritance. His object was to have as good a time as possible, then return and go to work like other men. There was a certain vein of philosophy in him which led him to take this course. He argued that the time to enjoy money is when one is young. Any delay would result in a diminution of the power of enjoyment.

The philosopher did not have long to wait for a test as to the soundness of his reasoning. In Switzerland he met a young lady who was traveling with her mother. The girl's name was Fredrica Smith. She took to Donald at once, and Donald returned her preference. There was another consideration. Mrs. Smith and her daughter appeared to be rich. Since his good time period would have blossomed and decayed on his return to America it might be well for him to marry Fredrica. The young lady was willing, and their troth was plighted.

Mrs. Smith was not a business woman, so she consented to a provisional engagement until their return, when Mr. Hatch would be expected to present his credentials to her husband. Donald winced at this, but hoped for the best. He had nothing to lose and all to gain. There would be no need for him to make it known that he had spent the money which would have enabled him to support a wife. He could assume a bold front and say, "I have only my strong arm to enable me to take care of your daughter, but by industry, honesty and perseverance I hope to keep the wolf from the door." If this did not make an impression sufficiently favorable to enable him to get the girl, well, philosophically considered, his condition would be no worse than it was before he met Miss Smith. But unfortunately love and philosophy will no more mix than oil and water. Despite his reasoning the young man felt uneasy.

The Smiths traveled in first class style, and Mr. Hatch, though he was coming to the end of his funds, was obliged while with them to spend a proportionate amount. He remained with them as long as they remained abroad and when they returned came over in the same ship with them. He had come of age while abroad and found his inheritance ready to be paid him, or, rather, his creditors, on his arrival. He issued a circular letter to them stating that a proportionate sum amounting to 50 per cent of their claims would be paid them, the rest to remain till he had made it.

It had been arranged that he should call upon Mr. Smith at his house five days after his arrival to ask for the hand of his daughter and present his credentials. He wrote out a speech full of vim and modesty, which he thought would sound well, and committed it to memory. On the appointed evening he made his call. He was met at the door by Miss Smith with an encouraging pressure of the hand and left by her at the door of the library, where her father was waiting.

When the two men stood face to face for a few moments there was the silence of the tomb. Mr. Smith saw in Mr. Hatch the young man from whom that morning he had received a note offering to pay him 50 cents on the dollar of the amounts he had advanced. Mr. Hatch saw his principal creditor. The two stood regarding each other intently.

"Poo!" exclaimed Mr. Smith.

"Which—you or I?" asked Donald impudently.

Mr. Smith continued to stare at him with an expression into which something of admiration was entering.

"I'll tell you what you do," said the president, with a sudden resolution. "Come round to the bank tomorrow, and I'll let you have another thousand."

"What for?" asked the walter, astonished.

"Wall street. Go down into that region where there have been so many shining lights, and in time you will outshine them all. When you have shown what you can do there come back, and I'll find still wants you who may have you."

Mr. Hatch showed what he could do within three months. He failed for $100,000 and tucked away $50,000. Then he married Fredrica.

CHAMPION WOMAN PEDESTRIAN, A BOSTON SOCIETY BELLE
Miss Eleanor Sears, Boston heiress, accompanied by Wm. T. Coleman on her 90 1/2 mile walk.

San Francisco—Accompanied by a host of friends and admirers in every conceivable conveyance, from a bicycle to an automobile, Miss Eleanor Sears walked 90 1/2 miles against time from Burlington to Del Monte. The gaudy Boston society girl and athlete astonished her most optimistic friends. The first 63 miles she made in an average of 18 1/2 miles and arrived at Gilroy in record time.

The contest was the outcome of a friendly wager of $200 placed by Miss Jennie Crocker that Miss Sears could walk the 90 1/2 miles in 55 hours. When the contest was over everyone who had followed this enterprising athlete girl realized that only nerve and determination had carried her through and pronounced it the plumkiest fight they had ever seen. Miss Eleanor Sears is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Sears, a millionaire couple who maintain a summer home at Beverly farms, Mass., and a city house in Boston back bay. Her father is heavily interested in Calumet and Hecla and other copper stocks and in several of the leading railroads of the country.

From one end of the social world of the United States to the other she has been noted for her athletic proclivities and her attractive manner of dressing. The latter fact made her extremely popular at Newport, but the former caused her to leave the place in disgust her conclusion of the men there after a season or two spent among them being that they were a collection of "sissies."

There is scarcely any line of athletics which she has not taken up with success. She has won several championship contests at tennis and has a loyal champion in Miss May Sutton who declares her to be the best dressed and most attractive woman in the United States.

A daring swimmer, she, time and again has come to the forefront by performing some dangerous and spectacular feat in the water. She can sail a yacht, row a boat and paddle a canoe with ease and dexterity. She has demonstrated her ability on the docks by making more than one drive of 200 yards. It seems immaterial to her the particular line of athletics she takes up. Within a short time she works herself into the championship class and stays there.

Recently she took up polo and before long made an ineffectual endeavor to play with men. Her claims for this particular honor had ample foundation for she has long been recognized as one of the dashing horsewomen of the country, guiding her horse at the last Madison Square garden show, at which she took the blue ribbon for the phantom event. On this occasion her skill aroused the enthusiasm of the scores of crack drivers present, who cheered her to the echo. Her health, wealth and beauty have made her extremely popular wherever she went and numberless men have been rumored to have been engaged to her, among them Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and young Vanderbilt. The rumors, however, died away to give place to others.

New York's Truancy Problem.

Truancy is on the increase in New York city, and the board of education complains of the indifference of parents. About 120 parents are taken before the city magistrate each month for violating the law. The largest number are from among the Italians, where there are the most children, and the next highest number comes from native born parents.

Morals.
I should like to abolish morals, which have come to be something entirely negative: "Do not steal," etc. A man who would be moral after that fashion would be the most colorless, the saddest, the least beautiful of beings. The most moral man would be cold and lifeless. The moral man is the noble man, who, putting aside trifling and vulgar rules, exhales beautiful thoughts through all his pores. The most important thing is that he elevates his thoughts and rises above the pale horizon which bounds the vulgar life, that he is noble and beautiful in mind. The immoral is so who sees only the end, who, though faithful perhaps in the performance of his lesser duties, has neither inspiration nor love.—Ernest Renan.

THE TONE OF BLASIUS & SONS PIANOS

Endures Like That of a Violin

This is due to the Blasius & Sons System of Construction which is different from that employed in the manufacture of any other pianos. It begins where the work of preceding great piano builders left off, embodying all that is best in the old system of construction, and adding certain new features which have attracted the attention and searching investigation of the scientific world and have been pronounced epoch-making in their importance.

BLASIUS & SONS are sold at a uniform price throughout the world, and represent the greatest piano values to be found today. Musicians everywhere proclaim them unequalled in beauty of tone, and the Blasius & Sons System of Construction insures a degree of durability unapproached in any other piano.

WELL PAID FOR TIME AND MONEY SPENT

I have completed a six months' course in the Shorthand Department of the Southern Wisconsin Business College and have found it to be all it was represented.

The instruction given and the methods taught were equally good and I feel fully repaid for the time and money which I put into it.

No one who wishes a thorough, practical business training can do better than take a course at this College.

HENRY STODDARD.

EACH STUDENT TAUGHT INDIVIDUALLY

I wish to express my regard for the S. W. B. C. Its system is excellent, its teachers unapproached and its individual instruction enables each student to advance as rapidly as possible.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the S. W. B. C. and those wishing a thorough business or shorthand training should go there to get it.

IRVING RIME.

RECEIVED HIGH GRADE TRAINING

Miles City, Montana, Dec. 18, 1909.

Three years ago I graduated from your business college, having completed a course in bookkeeping, Charter Shorthand and typewriting. After a year's experience in an office I came to Montana, and have for the past two years had charge of the office work and correspondence of the Calumet Investment Co., one of the largest real estate firms in the state. I consider the Charter system of shorthand by long odds the best system in use, because in the matter of speed and accuracy I find that one can easily compete with old and experienced stenographers who use Plummer and Gregg Shorthand. Several months ago I received the appointment of court stenographer in competition with several competent men, but was defeated from serving on account of my age. After three years' experience in office work and meeting many exponents, I can unhesitatingly endorse your method and system for teaching shorthand and typewriting. I would recommend any young man or woman desirous of entering this field to adopt the Charter system of shorthand and take a course in your school.

Respectfully,
VINCENT W. NORTH.

GRADUATES ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL

It gives me much pleasure to testify to the thoroughness and practicality of your college. I attended the school for three months and can fully endorse the efficient methods of instruction carried out. To any desiring to become thorough bookkeepers and stenographers I feel certain they will make no mistake in attending your school as the graduates of the Southern Wisconsin Business College are always successful.

Yours truly,
MARGARET MAC GREGOR.

INTERESTED IN EACH STUDENT

Janesville, Wis.

I, as a graduate of the Southern Wisconsin Business College heartily endorse it to anyone who wishes a thorough business education. One appreciates the fact that high standards are maintained when he gets out into the business world. The teachers are men and women of a high character and they have an interest in the student which is not found among all teachers. I am thoroughly satisfied with what this school has done for me.

MADE NO MISTAKE IN SELECTING S. W. B. C.

Afton, Wis.

After I had made up my mind to take a course in shorthand and typewriting, I naturally began looking around for a good school, and I am confident now that I made no mistake when I finally decided to attend the Southern Wisconsin Business College located at Janesville, Wisconsin.

The proprietor of the school is a gentleman whom it is good to know and he takes a lively interest in his work, being energetic, progressive and up to date in every way. The work of each pupil receives careful attention at his hands and thoroughness of preparation is essential if one would reach the standard of excellence maintained in the school.

I am satisfied that I made no mistake in deciding to attend this school and can cheerfully recommend it to any young man or woman who may contemplate taking a business course.

CHAPTER I.

The Makers of Maps.

There is scarcely a single case in which a woman is not engaged in some way to the making of a map.

"Then you offer me no hope, doctor?"

The gray mane of Dr. Samuel Ward waved like a fighting crest as he made answer:

"Not the sort of hope you ask. A moment later he added: 'John, I am ashamed of you.'"

The cynical smile of the man I called my chief still remained upon his lips, the same drawn look of suffering still remained upon his gaunt features; but in his blue eye I saw a glint which proved that the answer of his old friend had struck out some unused spark of vitality from the deep, cold flint of his heart.

"I never knew you for a coward, Calhoun," went on Dr. Ward; "nor any of your family. I give you now the benefit of my personal acquaintance with this generation of the Calhouns. I ask something more of you than faint-heartedness."

The keen eyes turned upon him again with the old flame of flint which a generation had known—a generation, for the most part, of enemies. On my chief's face I saw appear again the fighting flush, proof of his hard-fibered nature, ever ready to relin with challenge when challenge came.

"Did not Saul fall upon his own sword?" asked John Calhoun. "Have not devoted leaders from the start of the world till now sometimes rid the scene of the responsible figures in lost fights, the men on whom blame rested for failures?"

"Cowards," rejoined Dr. Ward. "Cowards, every one of them! Were there not other swords upon which they might have fallen—those of their enemies?"

"It is not my own hand—my own sword, Sam," said Calhoun. "That you know as well as I that I am already marked and doomed, even an I sat at my table to-night. A walk of a wet night here in Washington—a turn along the Heights out there when the winter wind is keen—yes, Sam, I see my grave before me, close enough; but how can I rest easy in that grave? Great, a country not yet dreamed of, must have Texas. We must have Oregon. We must have—"

"Free!" The old doctor shrugged his shoulders and smiled at the arch provocation.

"Then, since you mention it, year!" retorted Calhoun. "But, I shall not go into the old argument of those who say that black is white, that south is north. It is only for my own race that I plan a wider America. But then—" Calhoun raised a long, thin hand. "Why," he went on slowly, "I have just told you that I have failed. And yet you, my old friend, whom I ought to trust, condemn me to live on!"

Dr. Samuel Ward took snuff again, but the answer he snuff was in.

waggle his gray mane and stare hard at the face of the other.

"Yes," he said, at length, "I condemn you to fight on, John," and he smiled grimly.

"Why, look at you, man!" he broke out fiercely, after a moment. "The type and figure of a combat! Good bone, fine bone and hard; a hard head and fine; little eye, not deep; strong, wiry muscles, not too big—fighting muscles, not dough; clean limbs; strong fingers; good arms, legs, neck; wide chest—"

"Then you give me hope?" Calhoun flashed a smile at him.

"No, sir! If you do your duty, there is no hope for you to live. If you do not do your duty, there is no hope for you to die, John Calhoun, for more than two years to come—perhaps five years—six. Keep up this work—as you must, my friend—and you die as surely as though I shot you through as you sit there. Now, is this any comfort to you?"

A gray pallor overcame my master's face. That truth is welcome to no man, morbid or sane, sound or ill; but brave men meet it as this one did.

"Time to do much!" he murmured to himself. "Time to mend many broken vessels, in those two years. One more fight—yes, let us have it!"

But Calhoun the man was lost once more in Calhoun the visionary, the fanatic statesman. He summed up, as though to himself, something of the situation which then existed at Washington.

"Yes, the coast is clear, now that Webster is out of the cabinet, but Mr. Upshur's death last month brings in new complications. Had he remained our secretary of state, much might have been done. It was only last October he proposed to Texas a treaty of annexation."

"Yes, and found Texas none so eager," frowned Dr. Ward.

"Not and why not? You and I know well enough, Sir Richard Pakenham, the English plenipotentiary here, could tell if he liked. England is busy in Texas. Texas owes large funds to England. England wants Texas as a colony. There is fire under this smoke talk of Texas dividing into two governments, one, at least, under England's gentle and unselfish care!"

"And now, look you," Calhoun continued, rising and pacing up and down, "look what is the evidence. Van Zandt, charge d'affaires in Washington for the Republic of Texas, wrote Secretary Upshur only a month before Upshur's death, and told him to go carefully or he would drive Mexico to resume the war, and so on. Texas to resume the war? Excellent Mr. Van Zandt! I at least know what the friendship of England means. So, he asks us if we will protect Texas with troops and ships in case she does sign that agreement of annexation. Cuningham Mr. Van Zandt! He knows what that answer must be today, with England ready to fight us for Texas and Oregon both, and we wholly unready for war. Cuningham Mr. Van Zandt, covert friend of England! And lucky Mr. Upshur, who was killed, and so never had to make that answer!"

"But, John, another will have to make it, the one way or the other," said his friend.

"Yes!" The long hand smote on the table.

"President Tyler has offered you Mr. Upshur's portfolio as secretary of state."

"Yes!" The long hand smote again.

Dr. Ward made no comment beyond a long whistle, as he recognized his legs. His eyes were fixed on Calhoun's frowning face. "There will be events!" he said at length, grinning.

"I have not yet accepted," said Calhoun. "If I do, it will be to bring Texas and Oregon into this Union, one slave, the other free, but both vast, and of a mighty future for us. That done, I resign at once."

"Will you answer?"

Calhoun's answer was first to pick up a paper from his desk. "See, here is the dispatch Mr. Pakenham brought from Lord Aberdeen of the British Ministry to Mr. Upshur just two days before his death. Judge whether Aberdeen wants liberty—or territory! In effect he re-asserts England's right to interfere in our affairs. We fought one war to disprove that. England has said enough on this continent. And England has meddled enough."

Calhoun and Ward looked at each other, sober in their realization of the grave problems which then beset American statesmanship and American thought. The old doctor was first to break the silence. "Then do you accept? Will you serve again, John?"

"Listen to me. If I do accept, I shall take Mr. Upshur's and Mr. Nelson's place only on one condition—to England, I declare here is what I shall say to England regarding Texas. I shall show her what a Monton doctrine is; shall show her that while Texas is small and weak, Texas and this republic are not. This is what I have drafted as a possible reply. I shall tell Mr. Pakenham that his chief's avowed intentions has made it our imperative duty, in self-defense, to hasten the annexation of Texas, cost what it may, men and what will! John Calhoun does not shrink!"

"That will be my answer," repeated my chief at last. Again they looked gravely, each into the other's eye, each knowing what all this might mean.

"Yes, I shall have Texas, as I shall have Oregon, settled before I lay down my arms, Sam Ward. No, I am not yet ready to die!" Calhoun's old fire now flamed in all his mien.

"The situation is extremely difficult," said his friend slowly. "It must be done; but how? We are as a nation not ready for war. You as a statesman are not adequate to the politics of all this. Where is your political ally, John? You have none. You have outrun all parties. It will be your ruin, that you have been chosen."

Calhoun turned on him swiftly. "You know as well as I that mere politics will not serve. It will take some extraordinary measure—you know men—and, perhaps, women."

"Yes," said Dr. Ward, "and a prying slyly but they are; the two running after each other and forgetting each other; using and wasting each other; ruling and depopulating each other, all the years, from Troy to Rome! But yes! For a man, set a woman for a trap. Vice versa, I suppose."

Calhoun nodded, with a thin smile. "As it chances, I need a man. Ergo, and very plainly, I must use a woman!"

"They looked at each other for a moment. That Calhoun planned some deep-plaid stratagem was plain, but his speech for the time remained enigmatic, even to his most intimate companion.

"There are two women in our world today," said Calhoun. "As to Jackson, the old fool was a monogamist, and still is. Not so much so Jim Polk of Tennessee. Never does he appear in public with eyes other than for the Dona Lucrezia of the Mexican legend! Now, one against the other—Mexico against Austria—"

Dr. Ward raised his eyebrows in perplexity.

"That is to say, England, and not Austria," went on Calhoun coldly.

"The ambassador of England to America was born in Budapest! So I say, Austria; or perhaps Hungary, or some other country, which raised the strange representative who has made some stir in Washington here these last few weeks."

"Ah, you mean the baroness!" exclaimed Dr. Ward. "Tut! Tut!"

Calhoun nodded, with the same cold, thin smile. "Yes," he said, "I mean Mr. Pakenham's reputed mistress, his assumed secret agent and spy, the beautiful Baroness von Ritz!"

He mentioned a name then well known in diplomatic and social life, when intrigue in Washington, if not open, was none too well hidden.

"Gay Sir Richard!" he resumed. "You know, his ancestor was a brother-in-law of the duke of Wellington. He himself seems to have absorbed some of the great duke's fondness for the fair. Before he came to us he was with England's legation in Mexico. Texas there he first met the Dona Lucrezia. 'The said he would have remained in Mexico had it not been arranged that she and her husband, Senator Yturbe, should accompany him. Alas! in the Mexican ministry here. On these conditions, Sir Richard agreed to accept promotion as minister plenipotentiary to Washington!"

"That was nine years ago," commented Dr. Ward.

"Yes; and it was only last fall that he was made envoy extraordinary. He is at least an extraordinary envoy! Near 50 years of age, he seems to forget public decency; he forgets even the Dona Lucrezia, leaving her to the admiration of Mr. Polk and Mr. Van Zandt, and follows off after the slightly Baroness von Ritz. Meanwhile, Senator Yturbe also forgets the Dona Lucrezia, and proceeds also to follow after the baroness—although with less hope than Sir Richard has taste! The baroness von Ritz has brains and beauty both. It is she who is England's real envoy. Now, I believe she knows England's real intentions as to Texas."

Dr. Ward screwed his lips for a long while, as he contemplated John Calhoun's thin, determined face.

"I do not care at present to say more," went on my chief; "but do you not see, granted certain motives, Polk might come into power pledged to the extension of our southwest borders—"

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1909, by Mitchell Kennerley

"The impudentascal! Why, I—I shall have him apprehended!"

"I hope not," said the Cherub mildly. "That would complicate things. We didn't treat him very well the last time he was here."

"The last time!" echoed Mr. Hewington.

"Yes. He was the chap we had shut up in the leeches, you know. He was scouting around, to see what style you lived in before he played his cards."

"The unprincipled wretch!"

"He isn't as honest as he might be, but then circumstances have been against him."

"I shall refuse to hear a word from him," said Mr. Hewington.

"Now, that's too bad. He's coming to refund the amount he tricked you out of. You see, I've taken him on my private staff, so he could start square, but that better than getting into a legal snarl with him, eh?"

"But I fail to understand, Mr. Devine. What is your motive in doing this?"

"It has something to do with the countess," he confessed.

"The countess! Pray, Mr. Devine, kindly leave my daughter out of this discussion."

"Not much!" declared the Cherub. "Say, you might just as well get used to it now as later. I think a whole lot of your daughter, Mr. Hewington."

"Indeed, sir! Your impudence is astounding. I trust that you are not so presumptuous as to suppose that your—your regard is in any measure returned?"

"That just describes the case, Mr. Hewington. At least I did have some such idea until this fool Francois nudged ideas up for me. Do you know what he told the countess?"

"I am not interested, sir."

"[May be not, but I want you to listen, just the same, and I want you to let him tell his revised story to the countess. Why, see here, she thinks I locked that chap up because I was interested in his wife. Says he didn't mean to tell any such yarn, but he was posing as the count, and she couldn't see him, and it just naturally slipped out. Nice position to put me in, wasn't it?"]

But Mr. Hewington shook his head mulishly.

"But, great Scott!" protested the Cherub, "he meant that I was in love with the countess. He'd guessed that much. And, say, he guessed right. I've been in love with her ever since the first minute I saw her, and it's getting worse every hour. I don't know just how it is with her. She's never had a fair chance to say yet, but now that I've found out that count of yours is out of the way I mean to ask her once more if she thinks I'll do."

"Well, Cherub, why don't you?"

From behind a tall revolving bookcase which hid from view a corner of the library appeared the Countess Vecchi, flushed and smiling.

"Adele!" came from Mr. Hewington. "I've been listening, you see, I confessed. 'I couldn't help it, I came in to find father, and I heard you tell—" could you—will I do?"

And presently, holding her closely in his arms and looking at shorter range into her brown eyes, he was reasonably sure that he would.

"Guess I never knew what it was to be happy before, anyway," he whispered.

"Nor I, Cherub, dear," said the Countess Vecchi.

Small though the total amount of water taken for power purposes in proportion to the total amount passing over the falls may be, it has been sufficient to cause the shallower portions of the overflow at the edges of the falls to become entirely dry, thereby greatly reducing the total length of the crest line.

Changing Niagara.

Any one who was familiar with the appearance of the Niagara falls before the present operations were built and opened can settle the question as to whether the appearance of the falls has been affected by going to see for himself. Small though the total amount of water taken for power purposes in proportion to the total amount passing over the falls may be, it has been sufficient to cause the shallower portions of the overflow at the edges of the falls to become entirely dry, thereby greatly reducing the total length of the crest line.

SCHOOL SHOES

WEAR LIKE IRON

They wear best where the wear is hardest. Made of selected leather specially tanned to resist exactly the kind of wear a healthy boy or girl will give them.

Two layers of leather are sewed in at the tips of the toes, to prevent the toes kicking out. The soles are of extreme toughness.

Mayer Special Merit School Shoes are made to fit a child's foot in a comfortable, natural way that will prevent foot trouble in later years, yet they are stylish and good looking. Only the genuine have the Mayer Trade Mark stamped on the sole.

PRIZE—If you will send us the name of a dealer who does not handle Special Merit School Shoes, we will send you, free, post-paid, a handsome picture, size 12x18, of George Washington.

We also make Honorable Shoes for men, Leading Lady Shoes, Martha Washington Comfort Shoes, Yerma Cushion Shoes and Work Shoes.
